President's Message – by Virginia Taylor

November is Family Medical History Month. About 30 years ago, Dr. Kopp came out with an edict that every family should create a family medical health history. All you need to do is to go back through your ancestors and document, as much as possible, the cause of death of each person. Doing this will give you a very good picture of what diseases and conditions that you and your family may be prone to inherit.

Did many of your ancestors die of heart disease? How many had diabetes? Who had mental illness? This is just a sample of what you might inherit. At the time Dr. Kopp came out with his program, he suggested that as families gathered around the Thanksgiving table, they discuss what disease they already know are prevalent in their family. Then they need to start digging into death records to go back as far as possible for additional diseases.

I suggest that each of us, if we have not already done our family medical genealogy, that we start this year when we gather with our family. You might be surprised at what you find and may want to discuss with your family doctor.

Don't forget our annual Heirloom Discovery Day with Georgie Stillman on November 27th. If you have something you want appraised, please e-mail a description to Ralph Munoz (email munoz1951@cox.net, phone 619-421-7251) so he can send the information on the Georgie for her to do some preliminary investigation.

I hope everyone will have a very Happy Thanksgiving and I hope you are planning to spend it with family and friends.

October 23rd Program Review - "Queen Victoria and Royal Houses of Europe"

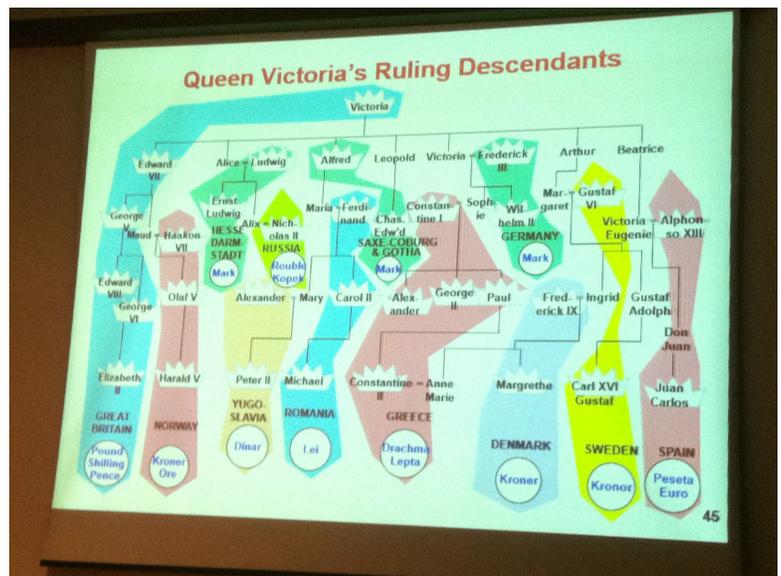

Jim Wells presented "Queen Victoria and the Royal Houses of Europe" at the CVGS meeting on 23 October 2013 at the Chula Vista Civic Center Branch Library. Jim is a numismatist and a historian, and it is a fascinating combination.

In his presentation, Jim outlined the ancestry and descendants of Queen Victoria (1819-1901), who reigned over Great Britain from 1838 to 1901 - 63 years. Victoria was in the Hanover line of British monarchs that started with George I in the early 1700s. In 1840, she married Albert of Saxe-Coburg & Gotha (1819-1861), one of her first cousins, and they had nine children and 40 grandchildren. One of her sons, Edward VII, became King of Great Britain after her death. The current monarch, Queen Elizabeth II, is one of Victoria's second great-granddaughters.

The other eight of Victoria's children married and had children, and many of them were part of Europe's royal families. During the presentation, Jim showed the marriages, the children, and the royal lines that resulted by intermarriage with other European families in Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Germany, Greece, Russia, Romania, Spain and Yugoslavia. Several other royal families resulted from intermarriage between cousins of Queen Victoria. From the beautifully done charts, the attendees received a great lesson in how all of the royal families of Europe are related. For each family, he also showed the coinage that depicted the royal families, right down to the commemorative coin released on 23 October for George, the new son of William and Kate (one of Victoria's 5th great-grandson).

In all, 33 of Queen Victoria's descendants have ruled as monarchs, and five are currently ruling European countries now.

In addition, there are several cousins of Queen Victoria who are monarchs of current European countries. Jim had an interesting photograph showing eight descendants or cousins of Queen Victoria meeting in 2013: Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain; King Juan Carlos of Spain; King Albert II of Belgium; King Harald V of Norway; King Carl XVI Gustaf of Sweden; King Henri of Luxembourg; Queen Margrethe II of Denmark; Queen Beatrix of The Netherlands.

The descendants of Queen Victoria can be found in the "Descendants of Queen Victoria" family tree at <http://wc.rootsweb.ancestry.com/cgi-bin/igm.cgi?op=GET&db=queenvictoria&id=I3>. This site has narrative about each descendant, often with pictures of the persons.

This was a fascinating presentation and everyone attending learned about the royal houses of Europe.

CVGS Research Group Review – by Randy Seaver

The October meeting of the Chula Vista Genealogical Society (CVGS) Research Group was on Wednesday, 9 October at the Chula Vista Civic Center Branch Library. There were 14 in attendance.

In the first hour, there were announcements about the SDGS bus trip to the Los Angeles Public Library on Saturday, 2 November; the SDGS Seminar in January featuring Lisa Louise Cooke; and the CVGS Field Trips scheduled to the FamilySearch Center on 30 October and in January, and to Carlsbad Library in November. Randy showed some photos from his Legacy Family Tree 2013 Cruise through the Panama Canal, and discussed the Ancestry acquisition of Find A Grave, the release of and update to Family Tree Maker 2014, and the improved Ethnicity Estimate in AncestryDNA's autosomal test results. Karen recounted her visit to the new San Diego Central Library and provided some pointers for what to expect getting there and accessing records there. She will write a newsletter article about her experiences.

In the second hour, we went around the table to share research problems and successes, including:

- * Karen found a 1985 book on Sketches of the Maryland Eastern Shore at the San Diego library, and found information about her LeCompte ancestors.
- * Berdella and John reviewed their trip to Ohio and Maryland researching her father's genealogy. They found lots of information at the Frederick, Maryland library and courthouse, and found an 1840 map showing land owners.
- * Dawn found her ancestors' marriage record in 1827 in Washington County, Tennessee marriages, which had her grandfather's surname and her own middle name as the wife's maiden name.
- * Arline found her 3rd great-grandmother, Rozella Salmon on Find A Grave in the Salmon-Tway Cemetery in Fayette County, Ohio. There were lots of family members and relatives in that cemetery! Several of the contributor comments were her cousins and should be contacted.
- * Virginia had another new contact through a MyHeritage tree - a woman in Los Angeles shares Virginia's grandfather but is two generations younger. She also found a more distant cousin in a FamilyTreeDNA match.
- * Helen's brother did a Y-DNA test on FamilyTreeDNA and is related to the Dill family in Maryland.
- * Gary found new information on his Philip Roff while using the Ancestry suggested records feature - in an online Albany N.Y. militia book. He also showed how to use Google Earth to find Wanda's family land in Wisconsin.
- * Susi was contacted by two more Jones cousins, and she and Mary are looking for John Pentico's father in central Pennsylvania.
- * Mary noted that Shirley had found her grandfather's passenger list record online.
- * Shirley had a Wright (in New York) contact through her online tree who is related by marriage. She also found her ancestor Daniel Miller in an 1869 directory for Oneida County, N.Y., but her is not in the 1870 U.S. Census.
- * Bethel found evidence of an ancestor marriage on a USGenWeb County page, but the date conflicts with other available evidence and family trees.

The next CVGS Research Group meeting will be on Wednesday, 13 November at 12 noon in the Chula Vista Civic Center Branch Library (365 F Street) in the Conference Room.

“Visiting The New Downtown San Diego Central Library,” by Karen Yarger

Adventure awaits! You’ve seen it, you’ve heard about it. You know you want to see it for yourself. Our new downtown library is truly a wonder, from its stunning three story lobby to its iconic dome. Taking a full city block, it is an architectural marvel that contains over 1,250,500 volumes, 400 computing devices, a 350 seat auditorium and a two-story charter school. All the latest green and energy saving technologies have been employed. About one third of its $196.7 million budget came from private donations, the rest from government funds, grants and leases. It is one of 36 branches in the San Diego Public Library system. But most of all, it’s beautiful. If you haven’t already visited the spectacular new downtown library (at 330 Park Blvd, between J and K Streets), here are some things to assist you on your first visit. Be sure to pick up a library map as you enter.

First, The basics:

You’ll notice the Garden Courtyard, with one of the library’s two entrances. By the end of the year, a café will open there. The eye-popping lobby has a used book store (closed on Wednesdays and second Tuesdays) and a great gift shop with an array of library-themed goodies. Walk through the first floor area to the best sellers - and be sure to see the unintentionally humorous “Suffragist” display in the CD/DVD area. The 9,000 square foot Childrens’ Library is a gem, with its Dr. Seuss murals, a bank of munchkin-size computer desks, and charming displays of vintage books, like Where the Wild Things Are and The Wizard of Oz.

The second floor contains business and social science collections, a health and wellness center, and a beach-themed teen center and homework area. The third floor holds periodicals, newspapers and is a regional repository for 1.6 million government documents.

Floor four is the Qualcomm Technology Floor, with a TV and media studio, a state-of-the-art computer lab, and a 3D printer; but it also houses the literature collection. The fifth floor is home to History, Geography, Biographies, and Travel, with special areas devoted to WWII and the Holocaust.

Floors six and seven contain the e3 Civic High charter school. There is no public access to the school which now has 250 students and will double by next year.

The eighth floor is home to the spectacular 4,096 square foot Helen Price Reading Room, with its 64 foot tall glass walls that look out on the city and bay. Sun-dappled light streams through the massive dome overhead onto comfy loveseats, desks and wicker armchairs. In fact, there are little nooks and niches throughout the library where you can settle in and lose yourself in a good book and enjoy the vast array of public art. The eighth floor also holds the Art, Music, Sports, and Entertainment collections. Here you’ll also find the Sullivan Family Baseball Research Center – with the largest baseball archive outside of the National Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown.

Rising above the ninth (and top) floor is the magnificent latticework dome, already an iconic landmark on San Diego’s skyline. It is made of eight steel mesh ‘sails’ that hold solar panels, and is 143 feet in diameter – larger than that of the U.S. Capitol Building! And, if the wind is just right, the openwork dome ‘hums’.

But the ninth floor is where you’ll want to be. Here you’ll find three rooftop terraces, various meeting venues, an art gallery, an ivied sculpture garden (with whimsical furniture), and the Hervey Rare Book Room (which isn’t open yet, but will house treasures like a cuneiform tablet dating from 2300 B.C.). AND (drum roll, please), this is where you’ll find the California Room with its San Diego Heritage Center and genealogical resources. Thanks to the San Diego Genealogical Society’s addition of their large collection, this is now the largest genealogical collection in the region. Since this is probably your ultimate destination, maybe this will help:

Some tips:

a) Plan your first visit for a Tuesday, Thursday or Friday when the library opens at 9:30am. Hours are: Mon & Wed – Noon to 8pm; Tues, Thurs, Fri – 9:30am to 5:30pm; Sat – 9:30 to 2:30; Sun – 1 to 5pm.

b) Take the Trolley. Even though the 250 spaces in the two story underground parking are free now, soon they'll be “two hours free with validation”. You genealogists know two hours is never enough. Take the Blue Line trolley from the Chula Vista H Street station to the Park & Market stop. Then just walk a block south to the library and spend all day. A Senior One Way fare is only $1.25.

c) Pack a lunch. The café in the garden court will open in about a month. You can walk a block toward Petco Park to Lolita's or other eateries, but why waste time and energy that you could be spending in the stacks? Enjoy your picnic on the ninth floor patio with its sweeping views of the city and the bay.

d) Take some one dollar bills. Use them for the trolley, to get a library card ($2), and especially to get a copy card, which you'll load like a cash card. The card machines are in the Copy Centers on the 2nd,, 4th and 8th floors. You don't need a library card to get a copy card.

e) Have a plan. My first visit consisted of just wandering around, agog at all there was to see. Before you go, enjoy a video tour at <http://www.utsandiego.com/video/play/61094/>. And see the library's website for general info and their catalog <http://www.sandiego.gov/public-library/>.

f) Restrooms are behind the elevator banks on each floor. None on the ground floor, however. Notice the book-shaped sinks!

For the Genealogist - The ninth floor:

The Genealogy collection is, of course, all cataloged under the Dewey Decimal System - by state (i.e., Pennsylvania is under 974.8), country (Ireland is 941.5), and general category (Civil War is 973.7). The front desk has the complete list.

A bank of eight computers offers free access to Ancestry.com, and there are tables with plenty of plugins for your laptop. I suggest you wander around the room a bit, to see where everything is. Reference books (RGY) are toward the front, periodicals (PER) beyond that, and there is a bank of file cabinets in the back right with pamphlets, miscellaneous papers and self-published brochures (treasures there!) – all under the Dewey Decimal System. There are also two microfilm readers (with printers that take nickels at 15 cents per copy – come prepared) and two microfiche readers. The copy machine is in the very back (ask someone to show you how it works, it's not as simple as it looks). Copies there are 20 cents each. Don't forget to load money on your copy card. Digital photography is allowed, but please use no flash.

Know what you'll focus on first by looking in the library's catalog (see above). I just typed in “genealogy Civil War” and got a good idea of where I wanted to look. Everything here is for Reference, but the fifth floor has some history categories that can be checked out. If you have other questions for the Special Collections/Genealogy Room, you can call the library at (619) 236-5800 and ask for the California Room. Enjoy our amazing new Central Library. Just don't do what I did... I was so mesmerized and distracted that I tried to walk through a glass wall.

CVGS Holiday Luncheon is on Wednesday, 11 December

The luncheon will have turkey, ham, and drinks provided by CVGS. The pot luck breakdown for the rest of the meal will be coordinated by JoAnn Bonner (phone 619-421-3628, email jabonner13@gmail.com) and Dorothy Alvord (phone 619-469-3483, email dja1224@cox.net) – please contact them before 1 December to coordinate potluck dishes. FamilySearch Center Research Trip Report

The CVGS research trip on Wednesday, 30 October, to the FamilySearch Center in Mission Valley (4195 Camino del Rio South in San Diego) was educational for 12 attendees. This event was planned and led by CVGS Member John Finch.

The focus was on learning about FamilySearch Family Tree (<https://familysearch.org/tree/>), the relatively new "universal" family tree - everyone can be in it, and the goal is to have each historical person have a profile with vital records, life events, a biography, photos, stories, sources, etc.

The morning started with a greeting from Dawna Jones, one of the center directors in the Media Room. The Media Room has a presentation setup and about 20 Windows 8 computers for learners to use.

FamilySearch Family Tree was new for most of the attendees, and they had to register on FamilySearch (<https://familysearch.org>, and click on Sign In and then Register). That requires a Validation sent to your email to be clicked on, and then the user can start working in FamilySearch Family Tree.

Donna encouraged everyone to add their own name, noting that all information about living persons is seen only by that registered person. Then their parents and earlier generations if known. Users should see if there are matching persons already in the Family Tree - and link to those persons rather than create a new person.

After the two hours learning about the Family Tree, the attendees took a guided tour of the FamilySearch Center seeing the classroom, the oral history video room, the microfilm collection and machines, book collection, and the computers available for free searching of many commercial databases.

Most of the attendees headed back to Chula Vista and met at the Marie Callender's for lunch and pie.

There will be another Research Trip to the FamilySearch Center on Wednesday, 22 January 2014.
